THE Pittsburg, Cincinnati & Pennsyl THE Pittsburg, Cincionati & Pennsylvania connection train on the Little Miami Rainroad, due here at 8 o'clock, met with several serious delays last night on its way to this city and arrived here only at 1 o'clock this morning, five hours bealind time. The other trains on its account were also considerably delayed. The cause of the first mishap was the caving of a large embankment of earth and stone about midway between Columbus and Pittsburg, which covered up a portion of the track and several cars in the rear end of the train. A few passengers were on board, but besides a severe shaking and a good scare, no injury was sustained. A posse scare, no injury was sustained. A posse of workmen were telegraphed for, and in about three hours the track was cleared. About ten miles this side of Xenia, however, by the misplacement of a switch, another delay of about two hours was caused by the locomotive and the bag-gage car jumping the track.
